

Stephanie Maier

Director, Favor International

One-line bio (for email signatures, intros, and QR-card footer use)

Director of Favor International and developing producer on the dramatic series Wall of Fire.

Two-line bio (for podcast bookings, panel intros, LinkedIn)

Stephanie Maier is the Director of Favor International, the faith-based nonprofit behind more than twenty years of ministry across northern Uganda, South Sudan, and the Chad-Darfur border. She is currently developing Wall of Fire, an eight-episode dramatic series sourced from the two published books of Favor's founder, Carole Ward.

Short bio (for the landing page "About" block and press kits, ~120 words)

Stephanie Maier is the Director of Favor International, a 501(c)(3) with field operations across northern Uganda, South Sudan, and the Chad-Darfur border. She oversees communications, strategy, and now film development for the ministry. Before stepping into the Director role, she spent years in writing and advocacy work, including as the author of The Righteous Fight: Reclaiming the Soul of America. She is developing Wall of Fire with the ministry's creative team, drawing on more than thirty testimonies documented in Favor's two published books. Her role on the project is creative producer and single point of contact for every rights, consultation, and development conversation. She lives in Florida. She answers her own email.

Producer-facing "why her" paragraph (for follow-up emails, not the landing page)

Stephanie is not a Hollywood producer. She is the sitting Director of the ministry that owns every subject, every rights thread, and every consultation path in this project. That is the unusual advantage. On a conventional faith-film project, a producer has to negotiate life rights with scattered heirs, work around a subject who no longer speaks to the ministry, or navigate an agency that controls the book. Here, every one of those conversations runs through one email address. Hers. It is the shortest path from a producer's "yes" to a signed agreement that exists in this category.

Contact: stephanie@favorintl.org

Only Jesus.